No watering and trimming

Real boxwood topiaries need to be trimmed and shaped every few days to maintain their perfect forms. You also have to water them, expose them to direct sunlight for a couple of hours every day, provide fertilizer-rich soil, spray pesticides, sweep up wilted leaves, and do so many more things just to keep them alive.

But with our faux topiary balls, you won't have to do any of these. They are very easy to clean - just dust them off or spray them with water once in a while. You may also opt to use artificial plant cleaner to be sure, but it will only take a few minutes of your time, leaving you to attend to more important matters.
